21 # Add additional requires below this line. This will only work if you have 22 # Requires supporting ruby files with require statements in the 23 # spec/support/ and its subdirectories. These files will be loaded before the 24 # run as spec files by default. This way you can use require to load 25 # in _spec.rb will both be required when you run rspec and when you
26 # run twice. It is recommended that you do not use require to load 27 # end with _spec.rb. You can configure the require method by using the 28 # option on the command line: rspec --require my_file
